WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Record breaking heat in Southern California is expected Tuesday through Thursday, with highs over the interior portions of the coastal plain and valleys in the 90s. At the same time, offshore flow will bring continued very dry conditions, with elevated fire danger through much of the coming week.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

The region is under a SW flow aloft, sandwiched between high pressure over southern CA and the Desert SW and the storm track over the Pacific NW. This pattern will continue through Saturday. The NW portion of the region will be mostly cloudy with occasional showers and gusty S-SW winds, with more showers and stronger winds over the higher terrain. Some locations like Weed will have southerly gusts to 35 mph or more for a few hours this afternoon. Valleys in the east and south will be mostly clear to partly cloudy with only slight chances of light rain showers on Thanksgiving Day and Saturday. On Sunday the pattern will begin to shift east and a colder weather system will move over the North Ops region late Sunday and Monday. Snow levels will drop to 3000 ft in the N and 5000 ft in the S. Dry and warmer weather with occasional northerly winds will prevail much of the rest of next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

***Local gusty northeast to east winds across Southern California Wednesday morning***

***Record heat and very dry Wednesday and Thursday***

Strong high pressure over the region will bring well above normal temperatures through Thursday. Maximum temperatures will be in the mid 60s to mid 70s across the mountains, 70s to low 80s in the Central California valleys, and 80s to low 90s in the Southern California valleys today. For Wednesday and Thursday, it will be in the upper 60s and 70s across the mountains, mid 70s to mid 80s in the Central California valleys, and mid 80s to mid 90s in the Southern California valleys. Winds will be light across most of the region through Thursday, but there will be local northeast to east winds of 10 to 20 mph with gusts to 35 mph across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Wednesday morning. Slow cooling will occur Friday through this weekend as the strong ridge of high pressure weakens. Minimum humidity will remain in the single digits and teens across Southern California through Friday and then increase into the teens and twenties this weekend. Central California will have minimum humidity in the single digits and teens Wednesday through Friday. Westerly afternoon winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Friday through this weekend. A Pacific trough will move into the West Coast on Monday causing temperatures to cool to near normal. This trough will also increase westerly winds over the mountains and deserts. At this time, all rainfall associated with the trough is expected to remain north of the region.
